Dear Colleagues,

This past year posed extraordinary challenges. With so much uncertainty regarding the fluctuating state of public health, students and their counselors were required to make weighty decisions based on imperfect knowledge. Your guidance amid these conditions was enormously helpful for students, and we are grateful for your work.

Looking ahead, we are cautiously optimistic that we will be able to welcome all students back to campus in the fall. Our entire faculty and staff—from residential proctors to professors—are working to ensure that students can safely enjoy the complete Harvard experience. While we continue to monitor the progress of the pandemic and will adjust our plans if needed, our goal is a full return to campus.

While Harvard remains closed to visitors, our website offers many digital resources to help students and their families get to know the College. Admissions officers will hold online information sessions throughout the summer and fall. Our virtual tour is available to help prospective students become acquainted with campus. Student stories illuminate many aspects of the undergraduate experience. And our social media channels provide yet another window into life at Harvard.

In the coming year, we plan to continue our policy allowing students to apply to Harvard College without standardized test scores. While students who have scores may send them if they would like, those who do not will be at no disadvantage in our process.

Finally, our commitment to financial aid is unwavering. As always, we meet the full financial need of all Harvard undergraduates without requiring loans. We have no limit to the number of students we can support with financial aid, and applying for aid does not adversely affect an applicant's chance of admission.

Thank you again for your tireless work in this difficult year. We wish you a restful summer, and look forward to continuing our work together.

Sincerely,

William R. Fitzsimmons

Dean of Admissions & Financial Aid

ADMISSIONS AND FINANCIAL AID

ADMISSIONS: WHAT ARE WE LOOKING FOR?

Some applicants demonstrate extraordinary promise in academic or research endeavors. Some show uncommon talent in other areas, such as leadership, performing arts, or athletics. Most of our students combine the best of both scholastic and extracurricular achievement. Personal qualities—integrity, maturity, strength of character, and concern for others—also play an important part in our evaluations.

Our aid is entirely need-based, and grant eligibility is determined in the same manner for all admitted students regardless of nationality or citizenship status.

FINANCIAL AID: REMOVING ECONOMIC BARRIERS

Applying for financial aid does not jeopardize any student's chance for admission, including international applicants. Indeed, the Admissions Committee may respond favorably to evidence that a candidate has overcome significant obstacles, financial or otherwise. All of Harvard's financial aid is awarded on the basis of demonstrated financial need—there are no academic, athletic, or merit-based awards. Harvard meets the demonstrated need of every student for all four years.

Our financial aid program requires no contribution from Harvard families with annual incomes below $65,000; asks no more than 10 percent of income for those with incomes up to $150,000; and expects proportionally more from families with incomes more than $150,000. Families at all income levels who have significant assets are asked to pay more than those without. Our financial aid officers work closely with families to ensure that Harvard is accessible to all admitted students. We do not require students to take out loans, although they are asked to cover their personal expenses through term-time work.

APPLICATION

For undergraduate study, students apply only to Harvard College. While applicants can indicate an interest in a particular academic area, they do not apply to a specific School or department. Harvard students declare their concentration (field of study) at the end of their third semester.

Students may submit additional materials, such as art, music, or research, using the instructions in their Applicant Portal.
